CJ recently got laid off from his job because of COVID. Nowadays, he spends a few too many hours on his phone. Out of friends, employment, and a romantic partner, he has too much free time and enough money to use it to the fullest.

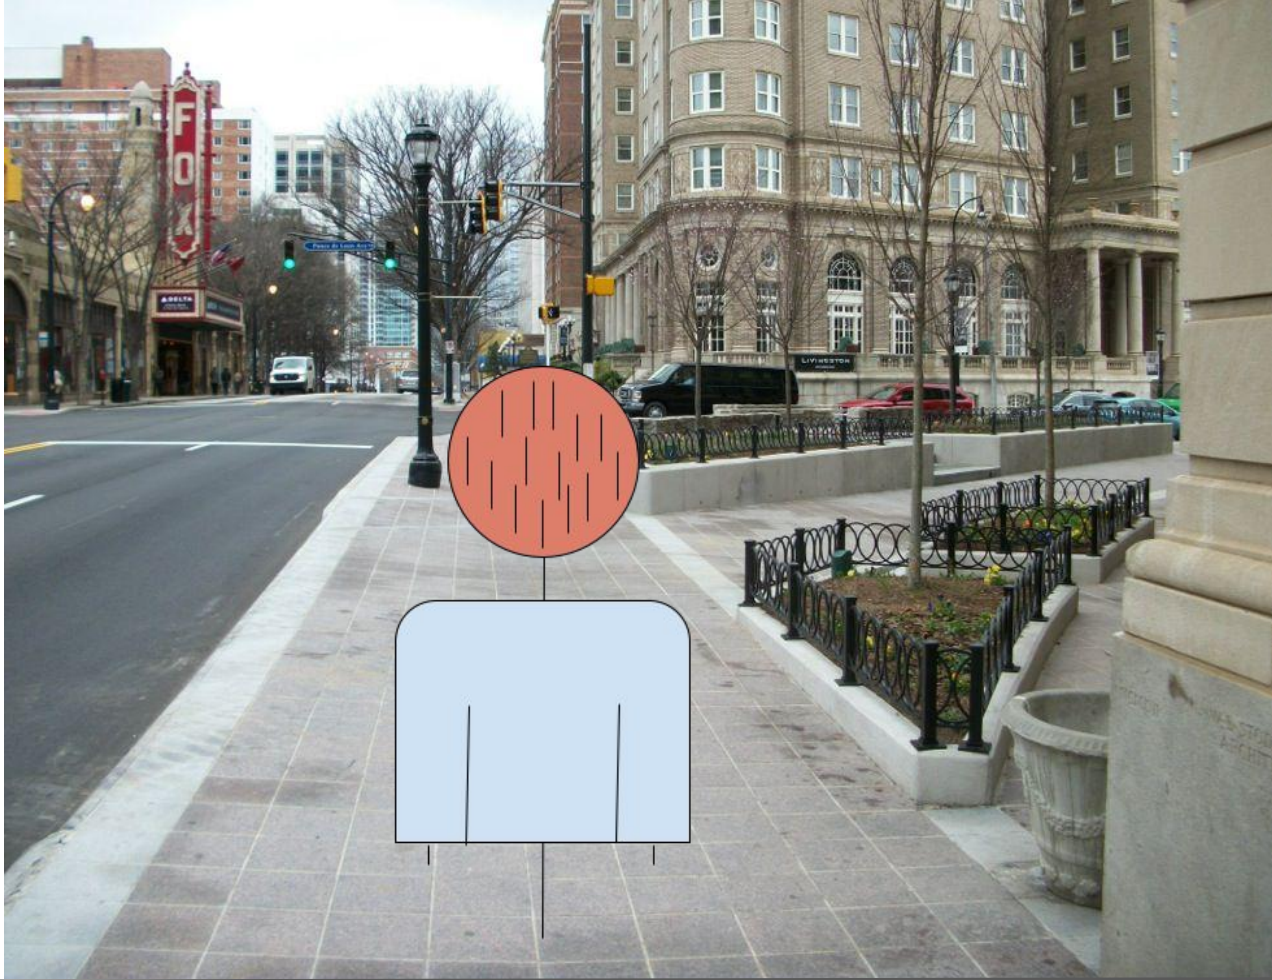

One day, CJ got an ad for app that claimed to help people find jobs, friends, true love, and even a bit of money!

CJ signed up and submitted a resume to his profile. Within mere days, he got a job offer from a grocery store owner looking to market his business to more neighborhoods.

After a week of working, CJ realizes he's discovered his true passion for marketing. He discovers his coworker, a customer service manager, through the app and sends him a message. They engage in a conversation and meet up in real life; a start to a great, long-lasting friendship.

A few days after this, CJ decides to set up the last part of his profile: romantic partners. He decided it was time to find love.

Upon searching through the app, CJ meets Chris. The two of them go out one night to a nice restaurant.
